

The Valentine's Party: A Left Right Story

It was Valentine's Day, and the Valentine's party was starting off RIGHT on time. The chocolate hearts were stacked to the RIGHT of the drinks at the far RIGHT side of the snack table, while candy was LEFT scattered everywhere, waiting to be grabbed RIGHT away. As guests arrived, they wandered LEFT and RIGHT around the room, calling out hellos RIGHT and LEFT, dodging each other RIGHT, RIGHT, LEFT, and LEFT again as they passed out Valentine's Day cards. Some cards went to the RIGHT person, some went to the LEFT person, and a few somehow ended up LEFT on the floor. Before anyone could figure it out, gifts were being passed LEFT, then RIGHT, then LEFT again until everyone was LEFT holding an armful of sweet surprises they couldn't wait to open RIGHT away.

Next came the game "Pin the Heart," set up on the far RIGHT wall because that seemed like the RIGHT place for it. The first player was spun to the LEFT once, to the LEFT twice, then spun RIGHT just for fun, before being spun to the LEFT again. Feeling confident, they marched to the RIGHT, turned LEFT, and proudly pinned the heart... directly onto a lamp sitting to the LEFT of the board. The room erupted in laughter so loud that people nearly tipped RIGHT over onto the couch to the LEFT.

That's RIGHT when disaster struck. Someone laughing too hard bumped the snack table on the LEFT, sending chocolate hearts rolling to the RIGHT, sliding to the LEFT, bouncing RIGHT, and disappearing under chairs to the LEFT and RIGHT. A guest dove to the LEFT to save one, while another reached to the RIGHT, but most of the chocolate had already escaped LEFT and RIGHT, RIGHT across the floor.

RIGHT when everyone thought things couldn't get worse, someone tripped over the RIGHT leg of a chair, knocking the punch bowl RIGHT to the LEFT. Drinks splashed RIGHT and LEFT as guests jumped RIGHT, stepped LEFT, and tried to save what they could. One brave guest slid the remaining chocolates to the RIGHT, while another scooped up what was LEFT and put them RIGHT on the table.

In the end, only three chocolate hearts were LEFT. The group decided the RIGHT thing to do was to split what was LEFT, pass the chocolates RIGHT and LEFT, and laugh about the Valentine's party disaster. As everyone looked to the LEFT and then to the RIGHT, they agreed on one thing. This Valentine's Day might have gone all LEFT, but it turned out aRIGHT after all.

